

Dr. Dubbs is an Associate Professor in Emergency Medicine at the University of Maryland School of Medicine and the Director of the Emergency Medicine Residency Program. After her residency training at the University of Maryland Medical Center, she completed a Faculty Development Fellowship with a certificate from the American College of Emergency Physicians Teaching Fellowship. She worked in the community hospital setting before returning to UMMC. In addition to medical education, Dr. Dubbs has interests in oncologic emergencies, with numerous publications, podcasts, and national and international invitational lectures on these topics. She has won many teaching awards, including the ACEP National Junior Faculty Teaching Award. She is also developing her interests in process and quality improvement, and hospital administration, and is a cheerleader for the advancement of women in the house of medicine.