

Kathryn Ritter is an Assistant Professor of Emergency Medicine and an Assistant Program Director for the Emergency Medicine residency at Johns Hopkins. She completed her residency training at Vanderbilt University Medical Center, where she served as Chief Resident and her fellowship in Education Scholarship at Oregon Health & Science University. Her professional interests include curriculum development, coaching, and on-shift feedback.