

Sarah K. Sommerkamp, MD is an Assistant Professor of Emergency Medicine at the University of Maryland School of Medicine. She is currently the Associate Director of Emergency Medicine at the Midtown Campus. She is the Quality and Safety lead physician for Emergency Medicine. She received her medical degree from Eastern Virginia Medical School and then completed an emergency medicine residency, followed by an emergency ultrasound fellowship at the University of Maryland. She has completed the ACEP Teaching Fellowship and the first 2 stages of the ACEP Directors Academy. She has academic teaching interests in Emergency Ultrasound, OB/GYN, urogenital topics, and patient safety and flow.