

Dr. Peter DeBlieux, completed medical school at Louisiana State Health Science Center, completed internship in Internal Medicine LSUHSC Department of Medicine, residency and Chief residency in Emergency Medicine LSUHSC Charity Hospital, completed Pulmonary Critical Care fellowship LSUHSC Section of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine at LSUHSC Charity Hospital. Former Program Director of the LSUHSC Charity Hospital Emergency Medicine Residency for ten years, former Director of Resident and Faculty Development for ten years, former Emergency Department Director of the Interim LSU Hospital post Katrina. Appointments with both LSUHSC as Clinical Professor of Medicine and Tulane University Medical School as Clinical Professor of Surgery. Current teaching faculty in Emergency Medicine and the Medical Intensive Care Unit of LSUHSC Charity Hospital and University Medical Center New Orleans for over 30 years. Former Hospital leadership roles as the Director of Quality and Patient Safety, Chief Medical Officer, and Chief Experience Officer at University Medical Center New Orleans. Currently he is the LSUHSC New Orleans School of Medicine Assistant Dean of Advanced Learning and Simulation. He also serves as the Lead Emergency Medicine Physician for the New Orleans Saints visiting Teams and is the Venue Medical Director for the College Football Playoff Sugar Bowl.